

Asia Center Graduate Student Associate-in-Residence Program

The Asia Center Graduate Student Associates in Residence (GSAR) program provides a limited number of Asia Center GSAs with shared office space in the Center for Government and International Studies South Building. GSARs are students in the final year or two of dissertation writing. The Asia Center expects its GSARs to use their offices regularly (at least three days/week). Because of space limitations in CGIS, the Asia Center at present can house only four GSARs.

Please indicate whether you are applying to be an Associate-in-residence (please note that the Associates and Associates-in-Residence programs are not mutually exclusive – all applicants for Associate-in-Residence status are automatically considered for Associate status as well):
