

APPENDIX G

List of Sibao Imprints

This is a composite list of all surviving records of Sibao imprints. It includes the titles listed on all property-division documents, account books, and book lists, as well as from woodblocks, unbound pages, and some texts in private hands or in the Sibao exhibit hall that I was allowed to photograph or photocopy during my field work in Sibao. (Local informants tended to identify any old book found in Wuge or Mawu as a Sibao publication; thus the exhibit hall collection contains a considerable number of texts that are not Sibao imprints. I have excluded such texts from the list.)

The source for each title is listed in the last column; "Private collection/exhibit" refers to imprints that survive in private hands or in the exhibit hall. Some of the sources—the property-division documents and the Wenhai lou account book—reveal the publishing house; where the publishing house and date of publication are known for texts in the private collections or the exhibit hall, I have put that information in the "Sources" column.

Many of the titles listed in the property-division documents, account books, and book lists are abbreviated. In addition, the poor condition of many of these sources means that many titles survive only as one or two characters. Except where price information is given, I have excluded titles too abbreviated or fragmentary to be of use.

Prices are drawn from the two account books and are given in liang 两, qian 錢, fen 分, and li 磅. Wholesale prices (from the Wenhai lou account book) are marked with a "W"; retail prices (from the itinerant booksellers' account book, identified as 鄭位南帳本) with "R." Price information from this latter source is difficult to interpret, for it is not clear whether the amount recorded after a title is the full retail price of the text or the remaining sum the buyer owes the bookseller after having paid a portion of the price. (Note that for certain titles there is a considerable range in amounts listed. Differences in edition may account for this variation, but it is also possible that the booksellers were in these cases recording money owed them, not the full retail price of a text.) Both account books are difficult to decipher; many of the prices are not legible.

In many cases I have not been able to identify the nature of the book from the title; future research may allow us to identify many of these texts. In cases where the title seems to give clear evidence of the nature of the imprint, I identify the text in the "Notes" column. But the reader should be aware that the relationship between the title of a text and its contents is not always clear. Thus these identifications—except for those of texts that I have seen—are tentative. Authors or editors, most of them drawn from the Cuiyun tang book list, are also listed in the "Notes" column. In almost all cases it is impossible to check the accuracy of this information or to determine the exact role of the person named in the production of the title, so I have used the vague term "attributed to" to designate these names.

Each different title is numbered. But when a title appears to represent simply another edition of a title, I have listed the slightly different titles as "a," "b," and so forth. Since many of the titles are abbreviated, my judgments of what constitutes a different edition of a text or even a different title are tentative. (The total number of texts listed here probably overstates the number of different titles.)

The characters da 大, xiao 小, and zhong 中 describe the size of a text (often with the character pian 片 on the Cuiyun tang book list); lao 老 and xin 新 the age of the woodblocks for a title (although they also indicate different editions). Xiu-zhen 袖珍 indicates a "sleeve" edition. Several texts, largely guides to the Four Books and Five Classics, on the Wenhai lou account book are prefaced with "Chen" 陳, "Gong" 貢, or "Mao" 毛; I believe these identify the surnames of the men credited with editing the texts. On the Wenhai lou account book, a title prefaced with pian 片 is not complete. I have put all these markers after the titles in the following list.

Brackets indicate characters I am filling in or substituting for what I believe to be mistaken characters.

Titles are arranged alphabetically by pinyin and, within each pinyin initial letter, by initial character.
